MANAGEMENT PROGRAM

LEARN TO LEAD, GROW AND SUCCEED IN BUSINESS

According to the US Bureau of Labor Statistics, employment of airline and airport managers is projected to grow 10 percent from 2020 to 2030. This growth is driven by the increasing demand for air travel, as well as the need for managers to oversee the increasing use of technology in the aviation industry. Vaughn has the expert faculty, career support and industry connections that will set you on the right path to a rewarding career. Vaughn's aviation management graduates move on to a variety of managerial positions that include operations, finance, marketing, supply chain management, air traffic control, freight, facilities, safety, executive leadership and more. Vaughn's management department has received specialized accreditation for its business programs through the International Accreditation Council for Business Education (IACBE).
